OPENING ADDRESS BY SECRETARY KNOX

New Structure to Be Formally Opened With Exercises on Tuesday.

In the presence of the President of the United States, Cardinal Gibbons and ding farewell to his generals, and the dignitaries of Central and South Americal Columbus Street on Friday evening. can Republics, dedicatory exercises of American primacy to Bolivar. These, the new building of the International in being selected, were considered the degree team of the lodge. Bureau of American Republics will be greatest acts of self-negation. Above held Tuesday afternoon and night.

Invocation by His Eminence Cardinal

Opening address by the chairman of the governing board of the International Bureau of the American Republics, Philander C. Knox, Secretary of State of the United States. Statement descriptive of building and work of the bureau by John Barrett, director of the International Bureau.

Statement covering the architectural features of the building by Albert Kelsey, of Kelsey & Cret, architects.

Address by Elihu Root, United States

Senator, and late Secretary of State. Address on behalf of the Latin American Diplomatic Corps by the Mexican ambassador. Senor Don Francisco Leon Benediction by the Rt. Rev. Bishop There will be musical numbers by the Marine Band, William H. Santelmann,

The dedication of the new building will mark the completion of a plan started in the winter of 1889 and 1890, when delegates from Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombla, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Paraguay, Peru, Salvador, Uraguay, and Venezuela met in Washington at the instigation of Secretary of State Elaine to discovery. of Secretary of State Blaine to discus with delegates from the United States WHISKY LABELS subjects of political and social interest to the people of the Americas.

Unlike The Hague conference, the meeting was not called to prevent or limit war, but was called in time of peace for a peaceful purpose.

As a result of this conference grew the International Bureau of American Republics. Later conferences were held at Mexico and Rlo Janeiro, and one will be held this year at Buenos Ayres.

A small building was leased opposite the State, War, and Navy structure in 1890. But the work grew so rapidly that it was decided to build a new structure, the cost to be apportioned pro rata among the Latin countries.

After some years delay, during which time the original plans were changed so that it was decided to build a much larger structure, Andrew Carnegie came forward with an offer of $750,000.

Later the United States Congress ap propriated $200,000 for the site. On May 11, 1908, the cornerstone of the new building was laid by President

Roosevelt in the presence of a dis-tinguished assemblage, the invocation being said by Cardinal Gibbons and he benediction delivered by Bishop ranston. John Barrett, director of the Cranston. John Barrett, director of the bureau, presided.

The building is of white Georgia marble over a steel frame interior construction. The Norcross Brothers Company, of Worcester, Mass., were the contractors.

The three-fold purpose of the building—a library in memory of Columbus, an office for general work, and a home of the International Union of American Republics—are well arranged for in the disposition of space. The architects have told the story of the P2n-American Union, and striking events in the history of the countries forming the union. In the first glimpse the visitor gets of the building, the two grand divisions representing North and South America are shown. The entrance portico, with three portals leading to the interior, is between two great pylons at the foot of each of which there is a colossal group of statuary, one symbolizing the energetic spirit of North America, the other the restful spirit of the South.

Acts of Self-Negation.

Acts of Self-Negation.

The style of architecture corresponds the best Latin-American type of one hundred years ago, conforming, however, to the climate of Washington. In proportions, the building is Spanish. Inside, everything is of the South. The pavement of the patio is on Enfield tiles, in contrast to the marble of the surrounding corridors. In the vaulted hall of the heroes are white marble busts of the leaders of the Southern Republics in the early days. The ceiling will be decorated ultimately with a pictured allegory representing the destiny of the American history will adorn the walls.

Among the other features is the board from where the government board of the school and chapel fund of the Odd Fellows' Orphans' Home, next Tuesday evening, in Odd Fellows Hall, in North Columbus street.

Arrangements have been completed for the lecture to be delivered by the Rev. John Handley, C. S. adorn the walls.

Among the other features is the board room, where the government board of the bureau meets regularly every month. The patio, with its fountain, archaic figures in tiles and marble, with tropical flora, will be the center of attraction. Above is a scheme of decoration that illustrates the Pan-America of today, the whole sure to win general approval.
